

Mark Freeman is a self-promoted, self-taught, multifaceted abstract artist. Freeman exhibits an array of artistic styles constantly experimenting and growing his creative techniques.

Freeman started successfully showing art in 2019 in several galleries in Leawood and Overland Park Kansas. Freeman quickly shifted his art business from gallery representation to a direct model where he continues to enjoy growing success with both original art and fine art giclee's.

Freeman continues to expand art sales through participation in local and regional art shows and exhibits, as well as, through self-promoted pop-up art shows and corporate art events.

Internally driven, and emotionally charged, Freeman's original abstract art and mixed media paintings have been described as "passionate and expressive". When viewing Freeman's work, many viewers comment that they are seeing the works of several talented artists due to Freeman's variety of styles. Freeman's explosive abstract paintings are often driven by deep, personal meanings or spiritual statements.

Freeman's art is driven by love which is the central theme of his work including his HEARTWERX mini-heart art paintings. HEARTWERX has evolved into the philanthropic mechanism for giving back to humanity. Freeman has two groups that are near and dear to his heart that are the focus of his giving which are children and veterans. Freeman donates at least 10% of his profits each year to children's and veteran's charities.